Instructions

Thank you for purchasing the NW-200TR-C Type-C to HDMI Wireless Extender. Before use, please ensure that the device you are using has DisplayPort (DP) audio-video output functionality.

- Insert the receiver into the HDMI port of the desired display and connect the USB-A power source.

- Connect the transmitter to devices such as laptops, tablets, or smartphones with a USB-C port to wirelessly transmit and play audio-visual content on the display.

- ⚠ The USB-C port must have DisplayPort (DP) audio-video output functionality.
- ⚠ You can use the included HDMI female-to-female adapter to extend the length of the HDMI receiver.
- ⚠ To mirror the content from an Android device to the screen, please disable the built-in DeX functionality.

- Simply remove the transmitter to stop mirroring content.

Frequently Asked Questions

 Q If there is no signal after connecting the transmitter and receiver, and you are unable to mirror content:

A Answer: The wireless HDMI audio-video transmitter does not require pairing and is plug-and-play. If there is no signal after connecting, please first confirm whether the connected device has audio-video output functionality. Remove the transmitter and plug it back in to the device if needed.

 Q How to reset for pairing?

Answer: First, connect the receiver to the screen and power it on. When a QR code appears on the screen (Note 1), insert a card pin into the HDMI pinhole on the receiver for approximately 3-5 seconds. The screen will display "Ready to Pair," and you can then remove the card pin (Note 2). Next, connect the transmitter to the device you want to use. Insert the card pin into the side pinhole of the transmitter's Type-C port for about 5 seconds, and the screen will show a checkmark, indicating that pairing is complete (Note 3).
